Bouslog

Bouslogs emigrated from the Provence of Lorraine, France. They spoke German due to the fact that Provence was successively German and French. It was originally spelled Bois-du-Lac. Later it was shortened to Boislac. German influence made it Bouslog or Bouslogue, Bauschlag, Bouslough, Boschlag, Buchlog.

It was a family long established in that region--which was part of Gaul and figured in the Crusades. The name was derived from the fact that its founder lived in or near the woods on a lake. Bois--woods, du--of or on, Lac--lake.

The family were of Huguenot faith. Some of the name are still living in this region according to one of the descendants who visited France.

The blazon of Arms borne by the Bouslog family is:

"Or, a bend azure."

An expert advises us that a thorough search of Continental Armories has revealed only one Coat of Arms appropriate for this family, and it was borne by a fourteenth century Seigneur de la Perede Boisse de lac. This Achievement is recorded in the Grand Armorial de France.

The farthest back members of the Beuslog family were three brothers born in Germany (Alsace-Lorraine)--John, Boston, and probably Rolla. John, the oldest, born in 1756, grew up to manhood and was compelled to serve in the army of the German Princes. When he came home on furlough he told his father he was never going back to the army; that he did not want his two younger brothers to be forced to suffer as he had; that the three of them would leave the country secretly and escape to America. The three brothers left over their parents' protests, escaped to some port, and stowed away on a ship bound for America. They concealed themselves until they were well on the way and landed in New York.

They talked things over and decided that one should go North, another West and another South. After the lapse of a year, they planned to return to New York and decide what part of the country was best suited for their permanent location. John and Boston, the two who had gone south and west, came back. They waited six months but the brother, who had gone north, never appeared. They are not sure of the name of the missing brother--Rolla, Rawley, Sebastian.

The brothers went to Huntingdon Co. and Bedford Co, Pennsylvania, then western Virginia in 1796. The next we know of them they and their families had settled in Grandville, three miles west of Morgantown, Va. now W. Va. John was a miller.

January 22, 1814 an act of the assembly passed--"lots and streets as already laid off on the Monongahela River be established a town by the name of Grandville." John Beuslog, Robert C. Scott,

James Tibbs, Thomas Wade, Jr., Joseph Dunlap, Thomas Hess and Felix Scott be appointed trustees. The town was laid out by Felix Scott.

It is tradition--John Bouslog took a wagon and six horses to haul supplies in the Revolutionary War and returned home riding one horse. This is not verified but was told at a Bouslog reunion in Newcastle, Indiana years ago.

In 1832 John and his children and their families came to Indiana--except David who came but left his family behind. However, he brought them later.

Boston (John's brother) and his son (name unknown) came with the others and probably entered land but of that no one is sure. The son practiced medicine. No one knows what became of him. The father, Boston, is buried in the Harvey Cemetery about five miles north of New Castle beyond Epileptic Village.

John Bouslog must have been a man of remarkable vigor at an advanced age. He entered his own land, was no dependent of his children; was reputed the highest jumper and fastest runner in the community, though he was 76 years old when he came to Henry County, according to the inscription on his grave marker. His entry was one mile east and one-half mile south of Mt. Summit. He lived to be 99 years old and his wife to be 97, both dying in 1855, according to their markers in the Harvey cemetery which are still legible.

The names of the children of John and Catherine Bouslog are listed in the large family Bible printed in German in Basle, Switzerland. It was rebound in Monongahela Co., Va. in 1796.

John and Catherine Bouslog had 7 children:

1. Daniel Bouslog christened July 29, 1784 d. Jan. 30, 1853 m. Matilda Ridgeway. Entered land 3 miles north of Messick. Eventually owned 300-400 acres of land--was a great raiser of wheat and was a prosperous man all his life. Some of his descendants are still living in New Castle, Indiana. 2 children
2. David Bouslog christened June 23, 1796 d. summer 1838 m. 1818 Va. Judith Scott b. Dec. 27, 1799 d. June 13, 1863

Dollie found it propping up a window in her brother Levi's mill and took it home with her. In 1938 it was at home of Leonard Jefferson $3\frac{1}{2}$ mi. S. W. of Winchester, Indiana.
4. Rachel Bouslog christened January 20, 1805 d. 1864 Jesse Mercer More about them later. 7 children
5. Catherine Bouslog christened July 6, 1807 m. Abram Boring They eventually moved to Anderson, Indiana. 4 children
6. Rawley (Rolla) Bouslog christened Feb. 14, 1810 d. Sept. 30, 1890 m. Catherine Howell. Finally settled in Peru, Indiana where descendants are still living. 7 children
7. Levi Bouslog christened April 25, 1813 m. 1 Elizabeth Massie m. 2 _____ Massie. Had grist mill in Henry Co. on Blue River near Rogersville. Bought and drove hogs to market at Cincinnati; built and operated for a time the first pork-packing plant in Muncie. He and his children moved to Oklahoma.

David Bouslog, son of John and Catherine Bouslog, christened June 23, 1796 d. summer 1838 m. 1818 in Va. Judith Scott, daughter of Major (1812) David Scott and Rachel _____ b. Dec. 27, 1799 d. June 13, 1863. David entered land in Henry Co., Ind. but left his family in Va. as Judith was expecting a baby (Mary Jane). In 1833 he went back to Morgantown, Va. They all planned for a time to come to Henry Co. Major Scott sold his holdings near Morgantown, built a flatboat to bring the families down the Monongahela, then the Ohio River to Cincinnati, but something happened to his ardor. They sold the flatboat, got back their holdings and remained there. So David Bouslog and his family came in the usual covered wagon in the spring of 1836. He stopped with his father while he cleared land and erected a cabin on his entry--2 miles north and one-half mile east of Sulphur Springs. All but one of his children had been born in Va. The baby, Enoch, was born at his grandfather's home in August, 1836. Before winter the family moved to their own home.

In the summer of 1838 David Bouslog died of milk sickness with only four acres of land cleared. But Judith Scott Bouslog was not easily discouraged. She had been trained from girlhood to spin and weave wool and tailor men's clothes. She helped the older boys of the family with the farm work during the day as much as possible. In bad weather, evenings, and often late at night worked with her garments. As the family grew up, she became prosperous. She was a devout Methodist and an expert horseback rider. She died following an epidemic of typhoid that caused the death of several of her kin and their children.

Strother Bouslog, son of David Bouslog and Judith Scott, b. Apr. 14, 1886 m. Percie Kerlin b. Nov. 27, 1827 d. Apr. 22, 1862. He sold his holdings shortly after his mother's death and in 1871 moved to Iowa near South English. Descendents of his still live near South English.

William D. Bouslog, son of John Scott Boushog and Amanda Davis, b. Mar. 2, 1860 d. Feb. 27, 1939 m. Nov. 5, 1884 Jennie Velnettie Pilant b. Aug. 26, 1866 d. June 24, 1942. They are both buried at Franklin Cemetery n. of Paris, Illinois on Route 1.

William lived in Clay Co. until he was 12 years old. He attended school off and on as his father could spare him from work. He never got farther than the third grade. The last year there a little girl, Jennie Velnettie Pilant, went to the same school. Will would carry her across the creeks and help her through the woods and she adored him. She was broken-hearted when he had to move away so Will gave her his hymn book and told her when he got big he would come back and marry her. She referred to this hymn book all her life as her "engagement present." After they were both grown Will came to visit his cousin, Henry Mercer, at her Grandpa Poff's. Of course, he went to call on Nettie. He made three trips over to see her. They were married on the thb third trip in her father's home in Parke Co., Ind. Henry Mercer was to get the license but took the measles so her father, Levi Pilant walked 20 miles to Rockville to get it. Her father and mother gave her some money as her dowry.

Then they came to Illinois. They started housekeeping in a one-room log cabin with a clapboard summer kitchen. They bought their furniture at Hodge Bro. Furniture and Undertaking Establishment for $44.cash. They lived in this cabin for 18 years before they built a new house in 1902 which still stands.

A poem written by C. M. Houghton and dedicated to William D. Bouslog expresses better than I could how highly he was regarded by his friends.

THE FRIENDLY HAND

You are gone and I am lonely,
 But I often think of you,
 And the earnest way you told me
 There's much business yet to do.
 I can almost feel your presence
 As my thoughts keep turning back
 To the times we were together
 And you'd slap me on the back.

Many times I've been down hearted,
 But your ever cheering word
 Brought me back to faith and courage,
 A new hope within me stirred.
 And you soon would have me trying
 By your pleasant clever knack,
 And the way you'd lend the pressure
 To your hand upon my back.

Those good times we had together
 When at work, or when at ease,
 Seem to linger in my memory
 As they always seemed to please.
 You so loved to tell the story
 Of my tumble from the rack,
 And would laugh and choke and chuckle
 Slap your hand upon my back.

And sometimes when low in finance,
 Needing credit or some cash,
 You would understand my trouble
 And would help me in a flash.
 With a look so clear and knowing
 And a smile you'd never lack,
 You'd reach one hand for your pencil
 Lay the other on my back.

Now I, whom you have befriended
 Many times in many ways,
 Miss those earnest confidentials
 Which I treasure these lonely days,
 And in future, when discouraged
 And all things are looking black
 I'll be strengthened by the memory
 Of your hand upon my back.

... But our friendship is not broken
 Though we are so far apart;
For the many things you taught me
 Lie imbedded in my heart,
And when life's work here is ended,
 If I follow in your track,
I feel sure you'll come to meet me
 Lay your hand upon my back.

Scott

The name is said to have originated from Scotia--daughter of that Pharoah of Egypt that was drowned in the Red Sea. The name Scott occurs in the reign of Alexander I of Scotland who died in 1124.

. All Bouslog descendants of Judith Scott and David Bouslog can prove eligibility to Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution and Colonial Wars (Dunmore). through the grandfather of Judith Scott, Lt. James Scott. Proven for Revolution and War of 1812 by Helen A. Wesp of Indianapolis, Ind.

Alexander Scott

Alexander Scott (Skoot, Allysander Scot) died August, 1751. Wife--Hannah _____. Record Staunton, Virginia, Augusta County. Received land patented by state of Va. in Henry Co., Va. in 1727. Bought lots in Fredericksburg, Spottsylvania Co., Va. Record in Augusta Co., Va. as tithable (taxable) August, 1750. Estate appraised 1751. Appraisement recorded Nov., 1753. John Scott made bond as administrator Aug. 28, 1751. He died and Benjamin Scott appointed later as administrator for both Alexander and John Mar. 22, 1753. Two of his sons were still minors when will was probated.

Alexander Scott probably lived on upper waters of James or Potomac River. No real estate was recorded where they lived as Va. discouraged settlement beyond the Alleghany Mountains as too hard to protect. The family had a wagon and many horses.

Staunton, Va. Court Records. Presented by "Praisers" Nov. 10, 1753. Alexander (Allysander) Scott deceased estate.
